

Editorial Notes

Welcome to the Inaugural Issue

It is with great pleasure and a deep sense of responsibility that I welcome our readers to the inaugural issue of the CIR Journal of Innovation & Applied Research (CJIAR), Volume 1, Issue 1, December 2026.

Published by the Centre for Innovation & Research (CIR), Bangladesh, CJIAR has been established to provide a credible and inclusive platform for the dissemination of original research, innovative ideas and evidence-based solutions to contemporary challenges. The journal seeks to connect academic scholarship with practical application and to encourage meaningful dialogue among researchers, academics, professionals, policymakers and practitioners across disciplines and geographical boundaries.

We are committed to maintaining high standards of research integrity, academic rigour, originality and ethical scholarly publishing. Through a robust peer-review process and an international outlook, CJIAR aspires to contribute to the advancement of knowledge while promoting research that can generate tangible benefits for society, institutions and industry.

The publication of this first issue marks the beginning of an important journey. I extend my sincere appreciation to our Editorial Board, reviewers, contributors and the entire CIR team for their dedication and support in bringing this journal to fruition. I warmly invite researchers and scholars from Bangladesh and around the world to contribute their valuable work to future issues of CJIAR.

May this journal serve as a platform for innovation, intellectual exchange and impactful research, and may its contribution to scholarship continue to grow in the years ahead.

Brigadier General Md. Anwar Shafique (Retd.)
ndc, psc, PGD (USA), MSS, MBA, MPhil, PhD
Editor-in-Chief
CIR Journal of Innovation & Applied Research (CJIAR)
Dhaka, Bangladesh